Dear St. Louis City Depositories,

I am grateful for all your intentional efforts and participation in our evaluation process. The Banking for Economic Equity (BEE) Scorecard is a tool that we are proud to rollout and use for years to come. Thank you for your feedback, your willingness to engage in our process, and most importantly thank you for the difficult work you all do every day to make St. Louis a financially prosperous city.

All of the scorecards have been posted and are available for review on the St. Louis Treasurer website. We will create a file folder to post any relevant documents for members of the general public to review to support the efforts you all are making in regard to customized products and programs as well as the opportunities for further investment in the St. Louis region. With all the feedback reviewed, we will be rolling out the newest version of the rubric and scoring guide to be presented to you all at a later date complete with more pointed questions and data thresholds for you to report on. The goal is both to get a more accurate view of your economic justice commitments to St. Louis and a clearer picture of what it will take to get us to the St. Louis we know is possible.

I hope this will be an opportunity to reflect on your scores, your efforts, and the efforts of your peers and ask what your organization can now do or continue to do to ensure that collectively, we can make St. Louis one of the most economically equitable and economically just cities in the country.

With gratitude and thanks,
Adam Layne
